ASSET PROTECTION ATTORNEYS

How does you know which trust fits your circumstances?

The most common use of trusts is for estate planning. Since asset protection planners know that asset protection works best when coupled with other legitimate purposes, using a trust to achieve both asset protection and estate planning results in a more formidable overall barrier against creditor threats, while efficiently meeting multiple objectives with a single strategy. It is not our objective to exhaustively review all estate planning trusts and how they will be treated in every situation.
