Who Needs Incapacity Planning and What Is It?

Everyone needs Incapacity Planning! Incapacity Planning is the process of planning for the unfortunate circumstance of becoming unable to control your finances or health decisions. While no one hopes to ever become incapacitated, as we grow older dementia and Alzheimer's disease become more likely to affect us. According to the World Health Organization, 47.5 million people suffer from dementia and 7.7 million new cases of dementia are recorded each year. Furthermore, with the increasing uncertainty in today's society, incapacity planning helps avoid the risk of the courts interfering and acting inconsistently with your intended desires.
