What's your view about liability insurance for risk management?

Generally, we are all for it. But you need enough insurance. Too little coverage will still expose you to a judgment in excess of your coverage. And a good plaintiff's lawyer can manipulate a jury to make an outlandish award far beyond your policy limits.

You can't predict what you can lose once you are sued. Years ago we could, with reasonable accuracy, predict the outcome of a lawsuit. Juries were sane. Judges cut excessive awards. Punitive damage claims that awarded a plaintiff millions for no damages were unheard of. That was then. The courts compensated actual losses. Not today. Courtrooms now redistribute wealth. You can't be confident that your million-dollar policy is enough. No matter how much liability insurance you carry, some litigant will sue you for more.
