ASSET PROTECTION ATTORNEYS

Here's a question that you are probably frequently asked. How can one protect their children from losing their inheritance?

This is an important and common question. You can spend your lifetime scrimping, saving, and sheltering your wealth, and leave your fortune to your kids who promptly spend or lose it. So you must also safeguard your beneficiary's inheritance. For this you'll need a spendthrift trust. The spendthrift trust will protect your beneficiary's interest in the trust from his or her judgment creditors and ex-spouses, since there is an anti-alienation or spendthrift clause in the trust to protect the trust assets from a beneficiary's creditors. The antialienation provision prohibits the [\[...continued on our blog\]](#)
